

The Moscow Times

The Moscow Times is the first daily English-language newspaper on the Russian media market and the initial project of Independent Media. The newspaper was launched in 1992.

The newspaper is the leading foreign publication in Russia. An independent and fair view on events in Russia and abroad is its calling card, in addition to penetrating analysis and accurate reporting. Although it was first intended for foreigners living in Moscow, over the years The Moscow Times has won a loyal Russian audience as well.

The Moscow Times has a unique circulation system – it is distributed in over 500 of Moscow’s most prestigious places, including business centers, embassies, hotels, restaurants, supermarkets and sports clubs.
